DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
Kolb's Store, the adjoining house, and the numerous outbuildings on the 1 1/2 acre lot comprise a complete and perfectly maintained grouping of late 19th and early 20th century commercial buildings. The store, begun by the Kolb family in the last quarter of the 19th century, was in operation until only a few years ago. When the last member of the family died this winter the buildings were vacated. The merchandize is gone but most of the furnishings remain to recall the scene of an almost vanished way of life. It was a typical country store, a place to buy coal, kerosene, and chicken feed. The walls are lined with shelves as high as they can go. The long counter has no cash register, just slots for the money to drop into a drawer. Rolls of brown paper and balls of string are suspended above it from the soot coated, pressed tin ceiling. The wooden floor is rough and blackened from years of use. The house and store are still heated with coal-burning stoves. The exteriors of the store and the house behind it are sheathed in horizontal wood siding painted yellow. The rest of the buildings: coal bin, chicken house, storage sheds, etc. are painted silver. The store fronts on Main Street, with a wide, open porch under a projecting gable.
